SUMMARY REPORT

DS-ADC-2007: OROFACIAL PAIN

Orofacial pain refers to pain perceived in the face and oral cavity, encompassing a range of conditions affecting the muscles, joints, and nerves. Common causes include temporomandibular joint (TMJ) disorders, dental issues like toothaches and abscesses, neuropathic pain, and conditions such as trigeminal neuralgia. Symptoms can range from sharp, shooting pains to dull, aching discomfort, often impacting daily activities and quality of life. Diagnosis typically involves a thorough clinical evaluation, including medical history, physical examination, and imaging studies. Treatment strategies vary depending on the underlying cause and may include medication, physical therapy, behavioral therapy, and, in some cases, surgical intervention. Effective management requires a multidisciplinary approach to address the complex and multifaceted nature of orofacial pain.
