EVENT SUMMARY

DS-ADC-1802: SOFT TISSUE MANAGEMENT IN PERIODONTIA

Soft tissue management in periodontia encompasses a comprehensive approach to maintaining the health and integrity of the gingival and periodontal tissues surrounding teeth. This discipline focuses on preventing, diagnosing, and treating diseases and conditions that affect the soft tissues of the oral cavity. By understanding the anatomy, physiology, and pathology of periodontal soft tissues, dental professionals can effectively assess their health and develop tailored treatment plans for patients. Non-surgical techniques such as scaling and root planning, along with surgical interventions like soft tissue grafting and crown lengthening, play crucial roles in managing periodontal soft tissue health. Additionally, emphasis is placed on patient education, oral hygiene instruction, and long-term maintenance to support optimal outcomes. Through a combination of advanced techniques, ongoing education, and patient-centered care, soft tissue management in periodontia aims to preserve periodontal health, prevent disease progression, and promote overall oral well-being
