SUMMARY REPORT

DS ADC 2203

Full mouth rehabilitation is not only the reconstruction and restoration of the worn out dentition, but also maintenance of the health of the entire stomatognathic system. Full mouth rehabilitation should re-establish a state of functional as well as biological efficiency where teeth and their periodontal structures, the muscles of mastication, and the temporomandibular joint (TMJ) mechanisms all function together in synchronous harmony. Proper evaluation followed by definitive diagnosis is mandatory as the aetiology of severe occlusal tooth wear is multifactorial and variable. Careful assessment of the patient's diet, eating habits and/or gastric disorders, along with the present state of occlusion is essential for appropriate treatment planning.
